

HIT BY "L" ENGINE

Anton Edeasy Knocked Down and Dragged Along the Track.

Lay Bleeding and Conscious While Trains Rollover Him.

Must Have Climbed the Pillars to Get Upon the Structure.

Anton Edeasy, a Russian, forty-eight years old, of 150 East Eighty-fourth street, was found just after midnight lying on the tracks of the Elevated road which runs through Pearl street, midway between the Franklin Square and Fulton street stations. He is now lying in a dying condition in Chambers Street Hospital.

From his appearance when found, the man had evidently been dragged for more than 100 yards along the track, by an engine. How he got on the structure, and how long he lay there before being seen, may never be known, unless he recovers sufficiently to explain.

"There is a Third Avenue train which leaves South Ferry at midnight, bound uptown. When this train got a block above the Fulton street station this morning, the engineer, looking along the tracks, saw in the dim light the body of the man lying on the structure in the center, between the tracks. The engineer had scarcely caught sight of the body before the entire train had passed over it.

Two blocks further along, at the Franklin square station, the engineer reported the matter to Gatekeeper Henry Boldt.

As soon as the train pulled out of the station, Boldt hurried along the tracks until he arrived at the point where the man lay. It was just a portion of the road where the structure makes a sudden turn, and Boldt was upon the body almost as soon as he saw it.

The man's clothes were torn, and exposed on the left side of the body, just above the hip, a large wound from which, as the injured man groaned and moved convulsively, the blood flowed, and running along the side of the structure trickled down into the street.

The man was without shoes or socks. The right side of his body was badly scraped and bruised as though he had been dragged along the beams for a great distance. His face was covered with blood, and there were a dozen or more deep cuts on his head.

As soon as Boldt saw the condition of the man he ran along to the Fulton street station and called to the gatekeeper there. Then he hurried back and carried the injured man to the latter station, where the engineer had already telegraphed for an ambulance to Chambers Street Hospital.

Policeman Charles A. Schultz had been in Pearl street, below the Elevated road structure, and had seen two men carrying a third man on a stretcher, and of the electric lights on the structure. He was up on the station platform by the time the men laid down, as comfortably as possible.

The man was not unconscious, and before the ambulance came he told Boldt that he had been hit by a train. He also told him that he was a butcher, and that he had been carrying a large piece of meat on his back.

He remembered walking along, and then he was struck by an engine, knocked down and dragged along the track. He also told him that he was a butcher, and that he had been carrying a large piece of meat on his back.

Poked Her Nose in the Soft Mud at Field's Point.

Passengers Transferred and Lost Only an Hour's Time.

The steamer Connecticut, of the Providence and Stonington line, plying between here and Providence, R. I., went around of Field's Point in Providence River this morning.

At the Company's office, pier 36 North River, it was learned that the Connecticut carried in the neighborhood of 200 passengers and a large cargo of freight. She left here last night and ran around in the soft mud at the extreme edge of Field's Point, in sight of Providence.

The passengers were transferred within half an hour, and arrived in Boston about an hour behind the scheduled time.

There was no excitement on board and no one was injured. The Connecticut is not damaged in the slightest degree, and will be in her dock at Providence this afternoon after having been lighted of a portion of her freight.

For a long time bad blood has existed between the Tharps and Days, prominent families. Oliver Tharp and his son, Will Tharp, and three of the Day brothers met at a quarrel on Sunday last, and a violent quarrel followed.

Day drew his pistol, and just as he was about to fire, Oliver Tharp stepped between Day and his son and received a mortal wound in the chest. Another of the Day brothers and Will Tharp were shot in the side and are not expected to live.

MURDERED BY HER SON.

(By Associated Press.) PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Two brutal murders occurred in this city early to-day. The first was that of Honor Foley, aged fifty-seven years, of 201 South street, who was killed by her worthless son, who had been drinking.

A few hours later Joseph Boettgen, a Spanish sailor, was beaten to death during a fight at the corner of Guilford and Bainbridge streets.

MUSTARD WAS PEPPERY.

Policeman Gray Says He Denied Passenger Transfer Tickets.

Elmer Mustard, twenty-two years old, of 25 East Sixty-ninth street, a transfer agent for the Third Avenue Cable Car Company, at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Third Avenue, was charged by Policeman Maurice E. Gray, of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, in the Harlem Court, this morning with disorderly conduct.

Before Mustard left the court the charge was changed to one of assault. Mustard was called upon at 1:30 this morning to demand transfer tickets for a man and woman who said Mustard had refused to give them. Mustard still refused, and abused the officer.

Later the agent went to the station-house and complained that Gray had struck him. While standing at the door of Tucker's carpenter shop, at Ninety-second street and Columbus avenue, he was seized by Gray and arrested.

When the facts were stated, Justice Tolson said that Mustard was charged with assault. Mustard demanded free transportation for five men and had struck him when he refused.

THREW A MATCH ON THE FLOOR

A Young Girl's Carelessness Starts a Blaze in a Flat-House.

Tenants Badly Frightened and Two Buildings Damaged.

The careless throwing on the floor of a lighted match is supposed to have caused a fire which broke out at 3.30 o'clock this morning in the six-story brown-stone flat-house at 123 West One Hundred and First street.

Before the flames were extinguished they had extended to the two-story frame house next door, and caused in a few minutes a big fire.

Mrs. Mary Brill lives on the first floor of the flat-house with her seventeen-year-old daughter Elaine and her nine-year-old son Ernest. The girl went to a picnic last night, and it was after midnight when she returned. She lit a lamp in an inner room, and threw the match on the floor. Fifteen minutes later the lamp was put out, and the house was in darkness.

Two hours after that John Sullivan, of 127 West One Hundred and First street, who was returning from the same building, saw a bright light shining through Mrs. Brill's windows.

He looked at that time as though it would be a destructive blaze, so a second alarm was sent out. The firemen, however, by great exertions, succeeded in confining the flames to Mrs. Brill's apartments in the flat-house, and in saving the outer shell of the frame building. The loss on the latter is estimated at $2,500; on the flat-house at $800.

ON WATCH FOR BURGLARS.

Owner of Pinocchio Hall Will Split Gore if He Finds Them.

Louis Hoefler, proprietor of Pinocchio Hall, a beer saloon in the basement of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, has become an amateur detective, and as the police have failed to catch the burglars who have twice visited his saloon within the last few months, he has set about the task himself.

Pinocchio Hall is the saloon in which the Fifth Avenue Theatre is located. Hoefler has secured a room on the second floor of the building, and has placed there a number of men, who are to keep watch over the saloon. Every night, at midnight, Hoefler and his men are to be seen peeping through a hole in his window shade, and keeping watch over the saloon.

He is in hopes that the burglars will pay his place another visit, and if so, he will get a warm reception. His pistols are loaded.

CAUGHT AT THE DOOR.

John Moran, nineteen years old, of 123 East Seventy-seventh street; James Johnson, eighteen years old, of 724 Columbus avenue; and John Horner, eighteen years old, of 107 West Twenty-ninth street, were held in $1,000 bail each by Justice Tolson, this morning, on a charge of attempted burglary.

Policeman Gray, of the West One Hundredth street station, saw the accused acting in a suspicious manner at the door of Tucker's carpenter shop, at Ninety-second street and Columbus avenue, this morning. They were found to have a lot of burglars' tools, and the door of the shop had been forced. They had not, however, had time to secure any booty.
